Instructions for Form 1040

Form 1040 is used by individuals to report income, claim deductions and credits, and figure the tax owed or the refund due for the year. Most taxpayers file a single Form 1040 with any required schedules attached.

Report all taxable income, including wages, interest, dividends, and other amounts, even if you did not receive a statement for it. Keep records that support the income, deductions, and credits reported on your return.

Filing status. Your filing status determines your standard deduction, tax rates, and eligibility for certain credits. Single, married filing jointly, married filing separately, head of household, and qualifying surviving spouse are the available statuses.

Adjusted gross income. Total income minus certain adjustments to income; it is the starting point for computing taxable income and for determining eligibility for various tax benefits.

Standard deduction. A fixed amount that reduces the income on which you are taxed. You may take the standard deduction or itemize on Schedule A, whichever is greater.

Taxable income. Adjusted gross income minus your standard or itemized deduction and any qualified business income deduction. Tax is figured on this amount.

Who Must File

Whether you must file depends on your filing status, age, and gross income. Even if you are not required to file, you should file to obtain a refund of any tax withheld or to claim a refundable credit.

Filing electronically with direct deposit is the fastest way to receive a refund. Free filing options are available for taxpayers below certain income thresholds through IRS Free File.

When and Where to File

For most taxpayers, the return is due by the fifteenth day of the fourth month after the close of the tax year. If that date falls on a weekend or legal holiday, the due date is the next business day.

You may request an automatic extension of time to file, but an extension of time to file is not an extension of time to pay. Estimate and pay any tax due by the original deadline to avoid penalties and interest.

Adjustments to Income

Adjustments to income, reported on Schedule 1, are subtracted from total income to arrive at adjusted gross income. They are available whether or not you itemize deductions.

Deductions

You generally choose the greater of your standard deduction or your total itemized deductions. Itemized deductions include certain medical expenses, state and local taxes within the applicable cap, home mortgage interest, and charitable contributions.

The qualified business income deduction may be available to eligible taxpayers with pass-through business income, subject to income thresholds and other limitations.

Figuring Your Tax

After figuring the tax, subtract any credits and add any other taxes, such as the additional Medicare tax or net investment income tax, to arrive at total tax.

Payments and Refund

Payments include federal income tax withheld as shown on your Forms W-2 and 1099, estimated tax payments, and any refundable credits. Compare total payments to total tax to determine your refund or balance due.

You may have your refund deposited directly into up to three accounts, applied to next year's estimated tax, or used to purchase U.S. savings bonds. Direct deposit is the fastest and most secure option.

If you owe, you can pay electronically from a bank account, by debit or credit card, or by check. If you cannot pay in full, you may qualify for an installment agreement.

Estimated Tax

If you expect to owe tax beyond what is withheld, you may need to make quarterly estimated tax payments to avoid an underpayment penalty. Safe-harbor rules generally protect you if you pay a set percentage of the prior year's tax.

Estimated tax vouchers, Form 1040-ES, are used to submit quarterly payments. Payments are generally due in April, June, September, and the following January.

Penalties and Interest

Interest accrues on any tax not paid by the original due date. A failure-to-pay penalty and, if you did not file on time, a failure-to-file penalty may also apply. An accuracy-related penalty may apply if you substantially understate your tax or claim a deduction or credit for which you do not qualify. Keeping accurate records helps you support the items on your return.

Recordkeeping

Keep copies of your filed return and all supporting documents — Forms W-2 and 1099, Form 1098-E, receipts, and worksheets — generally for at least three years from the date you filed.

Keep records longer when they support the basis of property, carryovers to future years, or claims for a loss from worthless securities. Organized records make preparing future returns easier.

Amended Returns

If you discover an error after filing, use Form 1040-X to amend your return. Generally, you must file within three years after the date you filed the original return or within two years after you paid the tax, whichever is later.

Interest and any additional tax on an amended return are figured from the original due date. If the change results in a refund, claim it within the applicable time limit.

Identity Protection

To help protect against tax-related identity theft, you may obtain an Identity Protection PIN from the IRS. Enter it on your return so the IRS can verify your identity and reject fraudulent filings in your name.

The IRS will not initiate contact by email, text, or social media to request personal or financial information. Be cautious of scams that impersonate the IRS and demand immediate payment.

Your Rights as a Taxpayer

You have the right to be informed, to quality service, to pay no more than the correct amount of tax, and to challenge the IRS's position and be heard. These are part of the Taxpayer Bill of Rights.

You have the right to appeal an IRS decision in an independent forum, to finality, to privacy, to confidentiality, to retain representation, and to a fair and just tax system.

The Taxpayer Advocate Service is an independent organization within the IRS that helps taxpayers resolve problems that have not been resolved through normal channels and that protects taxpayer rights.

Getting Help

Free tax preparation help is available through the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance and Tax Counseling for the Elderly programs for those who qualify. The IRS website provides forms, instructions, and interactive tools.

Consider a qualified tax professional for complex situations. Verify a preparer's credentials and ensure they sign the return and provide their preparer tax identification number.

Can I take an adjustment and the standard deduction? Yes. Adjustments to income are separate from the choice between the standard and itemized deductions.

How long will my refund take? Electronically filed returns with direct deposit are generally issued within about three weeks, though some returns require additional review.

What if I cannot pay what I owe? File on time to avoid the failure-to-file penalty, pay what you can, and consider requesting an installment agreement for the balance.

This package is provided for the taxpayer's records. Amounts shown were self-prepared. Verify each figure against your source documents before filing, and retain a complete copy of the return as filed.

Rounding: you may round amounts to whole dollars on your return. If you round, round all amounts; drop amounts under 50 cents and increase amounts from 50 to 99 cents to the next dollar.

Signatures: your return is not considered valid unless you sign it. If filing jointly, both spouses must sign. An electronically filed return is signed using a self-selected personal identification number.

Your Rights as a Taxpayer

The Right to Be Informed. Taxpayers have the right to know what they need to do to comply with the tax laws. They are entitled to clear explanations of the laws and IRS procedures in all tax forms, instructions, publications, notices, and correspondence.

The Right to Quality Service. Taxpayers have the right to receive prompt, courteous, and professional assistance in their dealings with the IRS, to be spoken to in a way they can easily understand, and to speak to a supervisor about inadequate service.

The Right to Pay No More Than the Correct Amount of Tax. Taxpayers have the right to pay only the amount of tax legally due, including interest and penalties, and to have the IRS apply all tax payments properly.

The Right to Challenge the IRS's Position and Be Heard. Taxpayers have the right to raise objections and provide additional documentation in response to formal IRS actions or proposed actions, and to expect that the IRS will consider their timely objections promptly and fairly.

The Right to Appeal an IRS Decision in an Independent Forum. Taxpayers are entitled to a fair and impartial administrative appeal of most IRS decisions, including many penalties, and generally have the right to take their cases to court.

The Right to Finality. Taxpayers have the right to know the maximum amount of time they have to challenge the IRS's position as well as the maximum amount of time the IRS has to audit a particular tax year or collect a tax debt.

The Right to Privacy. Taxpayers have the right to expect that any IRS inquiry, examination, or enforcement action will comply with the law and be no more intrusive than necessary, and will respect all due process rights.

The Right to Confidentiality. Taxpayers have the right to expect that any information they provide to the IRS will not be disclosed unless authorized by the taxpayer or by law.

The Right to Retain Representation. Taxpayers have the right to retain an authorized representative of their choice to represent them in their dealings with the IRS.

The Right to a Fair and Just Tax System. Taxpayers have the right to expect the tax system to consider facts and circumstances that might affect their underlying liabilities, ability to pay, or ability to provide information timely.

If Your Return Is Examined

Most returns are accepted as filed. If a return is selected for examination, it does not suggest dishonesty; selection can result from computer scoring, document matching, or random sampling. You may be asked to support items reported on the return.

During an examination you may act on your own behalf or have someone represent you with a valid power of attorney. If you do not agree with the examiner's findings, you may request a conference with a manager or appeal the decision.

If the IRS proposes a change, you will receive a report and, in many cases, a notice giving you time to agree or to petition the Tax Court before the tax is assessed.

The Collection Process

If you owe tax, the IRS will send a bill that begins the collection process. Paying promptly limits interest and penalties. If you cannot pay in full, payment options include short-term extensions, installment agreements, and, in limited cases, an offer in compromise.

The IRS must give you notice and, in most cases, an opportunity for a hearing before filing a lien or levy. You have the right to appeal many collection actions through a Collection Due Process hearing.

Recordkeeping and Documentation

Good records help you prepare your return, support items reported, and respond to any questions. Keep documents that show income, such as Forms W-2 and 1099, and documents that support amounts you report, in an organized file.

Keep a copy of each filed return. Prior-year returns help you prepare the current return, establish carryover amounts, and verify figures if questions arise later.

Refunds

Most refunds are issued within about 21 days of an accepted e-filed return. Paper returns take longer. Certain returns are held for additional review, which can delay a refund.

You can split a refund among up to three accounts, apply part or all to next year's estimated tax, or purchase U.S. savings bonds. Verify account and routing numbers carefully to avoid a misdirected deposit.

Powers of Attorney and Authorizations

You may authorize another person to discuss your return with the IRS by filing the appropriate authorization form. A checkbox on the return can also allow the IRS to discuss processing of that specific return with your preparer.

Innocent Spouse and Injured Spouse

Relief may be available to a spouse who did not know about an understatement of tax on a jointly filed return, and to a spouse whose share of a joint refund was applied to the other spouse's separate debt.

Interest and Penalties — General

Interest is charged on tax paid after the due date and compounds daily. Penalties may apply for filing late, paying late, or for inaccuracies; reasonable-cause relief may be available in some circumstances.

A first-time penalty abatement may be available to taxpayers with a clean compliance history who fail to file or pay on time for a single period. Requesting relief promptly improves the chance of a favorable outcome.

Identity Verification

The IRS may ask you to verify your identity before processing a return, especially if it detects unusual activity. Respond promptly to any identity-verification notice to avoid delays in processing and refunds.

Getting Transcripts and Copies

You can request a free tax transcript online or by mail to review return data, account activity, and wage and income information the IRS has on file. A full copy of a filed return can be requested for a fee.

This package is for the taxpayer's records. Verify each figure against source documents and keep a complete copy of the return as filed, together with all supporting statements.

Filing Options

You may file electronically or on paper. Electronic filing is faster, reduces errors, and provides confirmation that the return was received; most software notifies you when the IRS accepts the return.

If you file on paper, mail the return to the service center for your state as listed in the instructions. Use certified mail if you want proof of the date of mailing. An automatic extension of time to file can be requested with Form 4868. An extension gives more time to file, not more time to pay; estimate and pay any balance due by the original deadline to limit interest.

Ways to Pay

You can pay electronically from a checking or savings account at no cost, by debit or credit card for a processing fee, or by check or money order payable to the United States Treasury with a payment voucher.

If you cannot pay in full, you may request an installment agreement to pay over time. Interest and applicable penalties continue to accrue until the balance is paid.

Direct debit lets you schedule an electronic payment for a future date up to the filing deadline, so you can file early and pay later without mailing a check.

Refund Options

Refunds can be deposited directly into up to three accounts, applied to next year's estimated tax, or used to buy U.S. savings bonds. Direct deposit is the fastest and most secure method.

You can check the status of a refund using the IRS online refund tool about 24 hours after an e-filed return is accepted, or about four weeks after mailing a paper return.

Extensions and Deadlines

The filing deadline for a calendar-year individual return is generally mid-April. Taxpayers who are due a refund are not charged a late-filing penalty, but a return must be filed within three years to claim the refund.

Members of the armed forces in a combat zone, and taxpayers affected by certain federally declared disasters, may qualify for additional time to file and pay.

IRS Notices and Correspondence

If the IRS adjusts your return or has a question, it sends a written notice explaining the change and your options. Read any notice carefully, keep it with your records, and respond by the date shown.

If you disagree with a notice, you generally have the right to respond with an explanation and supporting documents and to appeal through the IRS Independent Office of Appeals.

Installment Agreements

An installment agreement lets you make monthly payments toward a balance due. You can apply online if you owe within the eligibility limits; setup fees may apply and can be reduced for low-income taxpayers.

Getting Forms and Help

Forms, instructions, and publications are available free from the IRS website, along with interactive tools that answer many common questions about filing requirements and eligibility.

Free filing options and volunteer assistance are available to eligible taxpayers. For account issues that cannot be resolved through normal channels, the Taxpayer Advocate Service can help.

How do I know the IRS received my e-filed return? Your software or preparer receives an electronic acknowledgment, usually within 24 to 48 hours, stating whether the return was accepted or rejected.

What should I do if I moved after filing? Notify the IRS of a new address using Form 8822 so any refund check or correspondence reaches you.

Can I file a state return separately? Yes. State returns are filed with the state tax agency; many software packages transmit the federal and state returns together, but each is processed by its own agency.

How long should I keep my return? Keep a copy of the filed return and supporting documents for at least three years, and longer for records that support carryovers or the basis of property.

This package is provided for the taxpayer's records. Verify each figure against your source documents and retain a complete copy of the return as filed.

Federal Filing Reference — Where to File a Paper Return

If you file a paper return, mail it to the Internal Revenue Service center for your state as listed in the Form 1040 instructions. Most taxpayers file electronically; this reference is reproduced from the instructions for taxpayers who mail their returns.
