Definitions, Disclosures & Important Information

ERISA Section 404(c)

This plan is intended to be an ERISA 404(c) plan, meaning plan fiduciaries may be relieved of liability for losses that are the direct result of investment instructions given by a participant who directs the investment of their own account.

Participant Fee Disclosure

Plan-level administrative expenses and individual expenses that may be charged to your account are described in your annual participant fee notice. Investment expenses are deducted from fund assets and reduce each option's return.

Qualified Default Investment Alternative

Contributions for which no investment election is made are directed to the plan's default investment, generally an age-appropriate target date option, consistent with Department of Labor regulations.

Vesting of Employer Contributions

Employee pre-tax and Roth contributions are always fully vested. Employer contributions vest according to the plan's schedule; amounts not yet vested are forfeited if employment ends before the vesting requirement is met.

Personal Rate of Return Method

Your personal rate of return is a money-weighted return that reflects the timing and amount of contributions, withdrawals, and earnings. It may differ from the published returns of the individual investment options.

Early Distribution Tax

Distributions before age 59½ may be subject to ordinary income tax and an additional 10% federal penalty tax unless an exception applies. A direct rollover to an eligible retirement plan or IRA avoids current taxation.

Required Minimum Distributions

Participants must begin required minimum distributions after the applicable RMD age unless still employed and permitted to defer under the plan. Failure to take a required distribution may result in an excise tax.

Plan Loans

If permitted, plan loans are limited to the lesser of 50% of the vested balance or the statutory maximum, must be repaid over a stated term, and are subject to origination and maintenance fees described in the fee schedule.

Rollovers

A direct rollover moves eligible funds to another employer plan or IRA without current taxation or withholding. An indirect rollover is subject to mandatory withholding and must be completed within 60 days to avoid taxation.

Beneficiary Designation

Please confirm your beneficiary designation is current. In the absence of a valid designation, benefits are paid according to the terms of the plan document and applicable law, which may require spousal consent.

Roth Contributions

If the plan permits Roth contributions, they are made after tax and qualified distributions of Roth amounts, including earnings, are generally tax-free if holding-period and age requirements are met.

Contribution Limits

Employee deferrals are subject to annual limits set by the Internal Revenue Service, with an additional catch-up limit for participants age 50 and older. Contributions in excess of the limit must be corrected.

Summary Plan Description

The summary plan description explains your rights and benefits under the plan in greater detail. You may request a copy from the plan administrator at no charge.

Statement of ERISA Rights

As a participant you are entitled to certain rights and protections under ERISA, including the right to examine plan documents and to receive a summary of the plan's annual financial report.

Blackout and Trading Restrictions

Certain investment options may impose short-term trading restrictions or redemption fees to discourage frequent trading. Review each option's disclosure before making exchanges.

Automatic Enrollment and Escalation

If the plan provides automatic enrollment or contribution escalation, you may change your contribution rate or opt out at any time through the participant website or by contacting the recordkeeper.

IRA Custodial Agreement

This account is maintained under a written custodial agreement. The custodian reports contributions on Form 5498 and distributions on Form 1099-R, and provides the IRA disclosure statement required by regulation.

Prohibited Transactions

Engaging in a prohibited transaction, such as borrowing from an IRA or using it as security for a loan, may cause the account to lose its tax-favored status as of the first day of the year in which the transaction occurs.

Spousal Beneficiary Options

A surviving spouse beneficiary may generally elect to treat an inherited retirement account as their own or to remain a beneficiary, each with different distribution and tax consequences.

Fair Market Value Reporting

The custodian reports the year-end fair market value of the account to the Internal Revenue Service, which is used to determine required minimum distributions where applicable.

Plan Administrator Contact

The plan administrator is responsible for the operation of the plan and can answer questions about your benefits, the plan's provisions, and how to obtain plan documents. Contact information is available in the summary plan description.

Investment Risk Disclosure

All investment options involve risk, including possible loss of principal. Past performance does not guarantee future results, and the value of your account will fluctuate with the performance of the investments you select.

Fee Impact Illustration

Even small differences in fees and expenses can substantially reduce the growth of your account over time. The cumulative effect of fees compounds over the years you participate in the plan.

Exchange and Transfer Requests

You may generally exchange among available investment options subject to any trading restrictions. Requests received before the market close on a business day are ordinarily processed using that day's closing prices.

Statement Delivery and Access

Quarterly statements are made available through the participant website and, if elected, by mail. You may access daily balances, transaction history, and plan documents online at any time.

Rollover Contributions Accepted

The plan accepts eligible rollover contributions from other qualified plans and IRAs. Rolling over prior retirement savings can consolidate your accounts, subject to the terms of the plan and applicable tax rules.

Unclaimed Retirement Benefits

If we are unable to locate a participant or beneficiary entitled to a distribution, the plan follows its procedures and applicable law for missing participants, which may include transfer to a default IRA.

Domestic Relations Orders

Your account may be subject to division under a qualified domestic relations order. The plan administrator determines whether an order is qualified and administers any resulting division of your benefits.

Tax Withholding on Distributions

Eligible rollover distributions not directly rolled over are subject to mandatory federal income tax withholding. Other distributions may be subject to withholding unless you elect otherwise where permitted.

Annual Notices

You may receive annual notices required by law, such as the qualified default investment alternative notice and the participant fee disclosure. Retain these notices with your plan records.

Market Value

The value of a position is calculated by multiplying the quantity held by the closing price on the last business day of the period, using prices obtained from third-party quotation services, which may be delayed or estimated for certain securities.

Cost Basis

Cost basis is the amount paid to acquire a security, including commissions and reinvested distributions, adjusted for corporate actions, return of capital, and wash sales where applicable. It is used to determine realized and unrealized gain or loss.

Unrealized Gain or Loss

The difference between the current market value of a position and its cost basis. Unrealized amounts are not taxable events; gain or loss is realized only upon sale or other disposition of the security.

Short-Term and Long-Term

A position held one year or less is short-term; a position held more than one year is long-term. The holding period runs from the day after acquisition through the date of disposition.

Covered and Noncovered Securities

For covered securities, adjusted basis and holding period are reported to the Internal Revenue Service on Form 1099-B in the year of sale. Basis for noncovered securities is reported to you for informational purposes only.

Cost Basis Method

The default cost-basis relief method for equities is First-In, First-Out unless you elect an alternative method, such as specific identification, before settlement of a sale. The method chosen affects the amount of gain or loss reported.

Wash Sale

A loss on the sale of a security is disallowed for tax purposes if a substantially identical security is acquired within 30 days before or after the sale. The disallowed loss is added to the basis of the replacement shares.

Settlement Date

The date a securities transaction is finalized and payment is due. Standard settlement for listed equities is one business day after the trade date. Interest and income accrue based on settled positions.

Dividends and Distributions

A dividend is a distribution of a portion of an issuer's earnings. Qualified dividends may be taxed at long-term capital gain rates; ordinary dividends and short-term capital gain distributions are taxed as ordinary income.

Capital Gain Distribution

A distribution by a fund of its net realized capital gains. Such distributions are generally taxable in the year received, even when reinvested in additional shares.

Record and Payable Dates

The record date determines which holders are entitled to a declared distribution; the payable date is when the distribution is actually paid. Purchases settling after the record date are not entitled to that distribution.

Estimated Annual Income and Yield

Estimated annual income projects the income a position may generate over the next twelve months based on the most recent declared rate; estimated yield divides that figure by current market value. Both are informational and not guaranteed.

Net Asset Value

For funds, net asset value is total fund assets less liabilities divided by units outstanding, typically struck once each business day after the market close.

Expense Ratio

The annual operating cost of a fund expressed as a percentage of assets. Fund expenses are deducted from fund assets and reduce returns rather than being billed separately to your account.

Asset Allocation

Allocation percentages are computed as the market value of a holding, or group of holdings, divided by total account market value. Allocation figures are as of the statement date and change with market movement.

Cash Sweep

Uninvested cash may be automatically swept to a money market fund or bank deposit program. Sweep balances remain available for withdrawal or reinvestment and, for money market funds, are not FDIC insured.

SIPC Protection

Securities held at the firm are protected up to applicable limits by the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, including a sublimit for cash claims. SIPC does not protect against a decline in the market value of securities.

Excess-of-SIPC Coverage

The firm maintains additional protection in excess of SIPC limits through a private insurer. This coverage applies in the event of firm failure and, like SIPC, does not protect against market loss.

Pricing and Valuation Sources

Securities are priced using closing prices from recognized market sources. Where a closing price is unavailable, a bid price, the mean of bid and ask, or a fair-value estimate may be used and is identified accordingly.

Order Routing and Best Execution

Orders are routed consistent with the firm's duty of best execution. Information regarding order routing practices and any payment for order flow is published periodically and available on request.

Free Credit Balances

A free credit balance is a liability of the firm payable to you on demand. Subject to your account agreement, such balances may be swept to your selected cash sweep vehicle.

Fractional Shares

Certain activity, particularly dividend reinvestment, may result in ownership of a fraction of a share. Fractional shares carry proportional rights to distributions and are valued at the same price as whole shares.

Corporate Actions

Events initiated by an issuer, such as stock splits, mergers, and spin-offs, may adjust the quantity and cost basis of affected positions. Adjustments are reflected as of the effective date of the action.

Time-Weighted vs. Money-Weighted Return

A time-weighted return removes the effect of the timing of cash flows to isolate investment performance; a money-weighted return reflects the size and timing of your contributions and withdrawals.

Reinvestment

When enabled, distributions are used to purchase additional shares of the distributing security at the reinvestment price. Reinvestment does not change the taxability of the distribution and creates additional tax lots.

Statement of Positions

Positions are reported as of the statement date and include settled and, where indicated, unsettled transactions. Amounts may differ from real-time balances shown through other channels.

Margin Not Enabled

This account is a cash account. If margin borrowing is later added, it involves risk, including the possible forced sale of securities, and is governed by a separate margin agreement.

Householding of Documents

To reduce duplicate mailings, we may deliver a single copy of certain shareholder documents to investors sharing an address. You may request separate copies at any time at no charge.

Business Continuity

The firm maintains a business continuity plan addressing significant business disruptions. A summary describing how the firm will respond to events of varying scope is available on request.

Proxy Voting and Shareholder Materials

As a holder of record, you may receive proxy materials and other issuer communications. Instructions for voting, where applicable, are provided with those materials.

Tax Reporting Forms

Income, proceeds, and distributions are reported on the applicable Form 1099 series after year end. Retain these forms and consult a qualified tax adviser regarding your specific circumstances.

Discrepancy Reporting

Please review your holdings and activity and report any discrepancy within the time period stated in your account agreement so that we may promptly research and resolve it.

Restricted or Control Securities

Securities subject to resale restrictions are identified where applicable. Sales of restricted or control securities may require additional documentation and are subject to applicable securities laws.

Account Protection Contacts

Questions about your account, including suspected unauthorized activity, should be directed to Client Services using the number shown in the footer of this statement.

Consolidated Statement Scope

This statement may present more than one account held with the firm under a single household or relationship view. Each account remains separate for legal and tax purposes even when summarized together here.

Valuation of Illiquid Positions

Positions that do not trade on an active market may be valued using estimates from pricing services or issuers. Such values are inherently uncertain and may differ materially from amounts ultimately realized.
